HAS OUR COMMUNITY A PERSONALITY ?

Communities like individuals, have distinctive characters and bear the marks of personality.

An individual is identifiable by his habits. The habits are formed by continued and repeated reactions to surroundings. Every person's character is a synopsis of his experiences. His manners and attitudes are indicative of his past thoughts and adaptations.

A society of persons is the subject of many stimulations and demands. It will respond to them in a certain definite manner. The sort of manner will perhaps be determined by the bent of its leading spirits. After a time the attitude of the group towards the main questions with which it deals will become crystallized in institutions. Observe the institutions of any group, society, community or nation and you will understand the type and quality of its collective thinking. The institutions are the society's habits and attitudes rendered determinate.

Our Toronto Jewish community is still in the stage of formation. The elements which compose it have but recently entered into play, and the strength of their proportions and combinations is still undetermined. Its basic formula has not been worked out. Its reactions vary, as it were, from day to day. If, therefore, one were asked to characterize the essential nature of the Toronto Jewish community, one would find it difficult to state just what its fundamental traits were. In some respects our community is quite advanced. In many others it is still primitive.

We already have a number of institutions which bespeak a variety of interests and reactions, but scarcely any of them is rooted so deeply in our communal consciousness as to be secure of its existence. Our community has not achieved the necessary consistency of attitude towards any need to give the resultant institution the fixity of a habit. Our institutions are always at the mercy of whims and circumstances. The support accorded them is erratic and vacillating. It appears as if we were not sure of what we wanted, and what we should do, and our collective habits lack certainty.

We need but examine some of the outstanding institutions in the several spheres of representative communal interest to discover the incompleteness of our group development.

Compare our religious institutions with those of other cities on this continent. In most American cities the drift of religious sentiment among Americanized Jews tends towards Reform Judaism. It is probably a case of an emasculated faith following the line of least resistance. Be that as it may, Americanized Jewry is being drawn towards the Temple, and the Temple is waxing rich and powerful. The section of the community which is interested in religious concerns has its mind made up. It wants Reform Judaism. It builds magnificent edifices. It maintains expensive ministers. It erects luxurious annexes to the houses of worship. There is no hesitation, no temporizing. Americanized Jews have built up a characteristic habit. The well-established Temple is the social crystallization of the habit.

LABOUR AND RELIGION

BY F. M. ISSERMAN

Wherever labour comes to power, religious institutions are manhandled. When the serfs in France rose and abolished the feudal regime, the church was discarded and the worship of reason substituted. When the Bolsheviki came into power in Russia, a huge sign was hoisted on the Kremlin—"Religion is an opiate"—and the revolutionists made strenuous efforts to suppress the power and activity of the clergy. When democracy enthroned itself in Mexico, the new administration, to strengthen itself, took drastic measures to nullify the power of the churches. This recurrent hostility of labour against religion may well give us pause, especially as the teachings of Israel's prophets, which constitute the ethical platforms of Western religion, contain innumerable exhortations to religious persons to do justice to the oppressed, to help the poor, to protect the weak, to speak for the humble.

Why is it then that so frequently in history, when the lower classes have come into power, they have evinced their hostility for an institution which was dedicated above all to champion their causes and to speak for their interests? The answer is not hard to find. Though the professions of religions are sympathetic towards the third estate, the practices of people subscribing to them have too often not been. Religious institutions, dependent as they are and have been on the generosity of the richer classes of society, have too often become the mouth-pieces of their patrons, and not the voices of the living God. A striking example of this was furnished us in Detroit recently when the Y.M.C.A. closed its pulpit to an invited speaker of the American Federation of Labour, because the "Y" officials feared tthat the presence of a labour leader in its pulpit would seriously embarrass its proposed campaign for funds for a new building by alienating some of its prospective anti-labour donors. Some of the churches in Detroit at the request of the Chamber of Commerce followed the example of the "Y," and cancelled their invitations to leaders of the American Federation of Labour to address their congregations. There are some who will say that the Y.M.C.A. and churches showed good judgment by refusing to alienate their rich supporters, that it was more important to the "Y" to get its new buildings than to have a labour speaker. To them I would ask the question, why does a "Y" exist? and why does a church exist? Does a "Y" exist to erect buildings or does it exist to propagate a religious ideal? What if it has fine buildings, if these buildings become mausoleums for the spirit of religion and of democracy? What about the churches which closed their doors to a speaker for labour to retain their rich members? They may have preserved their institutions, their buildings, their budgets, but they have prostituted the soul of their religion. They have bartered God for Mammon. It is not all-important that a religious institution flourish, that its treasury overflow, that it have grand structures. But it is important that a religious institution hold up high the banner of idealism, refuse to succumb to the threat of wealth, but heroically and bravely champion that spirit for which it was called into being.

MONUMENT NATIONAL

"The Struggle for Life," a thrilling melodrama with catchy music, will be presented at the Monument National this Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, by the Shukevitz Rosenfeld Yiddish Players.

The "Struggle for Life" is one of the better plays appealing to both sexes, to old and young, with strong situations relieved by plenty of comedy. Special scenery.

"BARBER OF SEVILLE"

"The Barber of Seville," the famous comic opera to be produced here on October 27, at the Forum, by the special grand opera company organized by Universal Artists, Inc., to feature the singing actor, Feodor Chaliapin, has an unusually interesting history, for it was composed and originally performed (in Italy, 1816) under the most extraordinary conditions imaginable.

Almost exactly twenty-four years ago John Hay, for the government of the United States, sent a diplomatic note to all the signatorial powers to the Berlin Treaty, 1878, protesting in the name of humanity against the treatment of the Jews by Roumania. He called attention to the fact that, far from living up to the provisions of the treaty which prescribed that Roumania should not make difference of religious creed a ground for exclusion to civil and political rights and that all foreigners in Roumania should be treated in perfect equality, the Roumanian government was, in 1902, constricting almost entirely the ability of the Jew to earn the scantiest means of existence. Mr. Hay protested, too, that the Jews, degraded and ground down by poverty and injustice, deprived by public acts of the inherent right of man to earn a living in agriculture and trade, helpless and spurned by their native land, were forced by Roumania to be exiles upon the charity of the United States since they came there unequipped in mind and body for the struggle for bread. Mr. Hay's note was followed immediately by one from Great Britain making the same protest and civilized humans everywhere spoke out against Roumania and her cruelty to the Jews.

How Roumania treats her Jewish subjects is a story always old and always new; old because its chapters began years ago; new because the policy of extermination is still in practice and because the book of persecution never closes. The historian, Lecky, said that the persecution of the Jews by Roumania "forms in the eyes of enlightened men one of the most disgraceful pages of modern history." Any fair present-day historian could say the same now and it would be true. Last month when the Roumanian-Polish treaty came up for ratification before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Seim the Jewish members of the Commission did not vote on the question because they thought Roumania's attitude toward the Jews makes it no honour for Poland to be allied with her.

Now there is no John Hay writing blistering notes against Roumanian atrocities. The government of the United States does not want Jews of any condition and if Roumania grinds her Jewish subjects to bits between the millstones of living in Roumania and having to find a home elsewhere no government on these shores is much perturbed. What does intrigue the citizens though, is the visit of Queen Marie and there is now being presented the spectacle of a democratic nation compensating itself for its lack of royal splendor by spending fortunes in the lavish entertainment of a foreign ruler.

In two of a series of syndicated newspaper articles Queen Marie has told why she wanted to come to this country: She wanted to see it, the people, the skyscrapers, the peace portal on the Canadian border, the wonders of the Pacific slope, she wanted to be on "the most beautiful voyage of her life," to thank the people for helping "to preserve the national integrity and the liberty of Roumania from the domination of German militarism"; to do this, to see that. News dispatches before her arrival also said plainly that she wanted to confer with American bankers since Former Premier Bratianu, who once opposed the Queen's trip, had been convinced that Roumania should encourage the co-operation of American capital.

Queen Marie shall have music wherever she goes in this country, music and avid interest and deep salaams before her. She is a lady with a fine flair for publicity, a taste for the sensational. She is always preceeded by the fanfare of trumpets, she is always talking and thinking in stuff good for headlines, always trailing clouds of drama, always on the front page of the world's news. To people in general, Queen Marie spells Romance. She appears a person picked by fortune to be regal, to be deep-cushioned forever, to be magnetic and powerful, to live grandly in velvets encrusted with jewels.

Jews in general must wonder what she really thinks of the persecution of human souls. How can she be happy near such utter wretchedness? Or is she one of those cool, detached, impersonal nationalists who has nothing against the individual Jews but who looks upon the collectivity of the Jews with an antipathy and superstitious fear which justifies every cruelty? No matter, the Jew must see her as an ironical figure, a colossal, heartbreaking contrast to the condition of Roumanian Jews under her rule. It will be interesting to see if the Jews as bankers share this feeling or if they care to help a country that mistreats the Jews when its agent is a Queen.

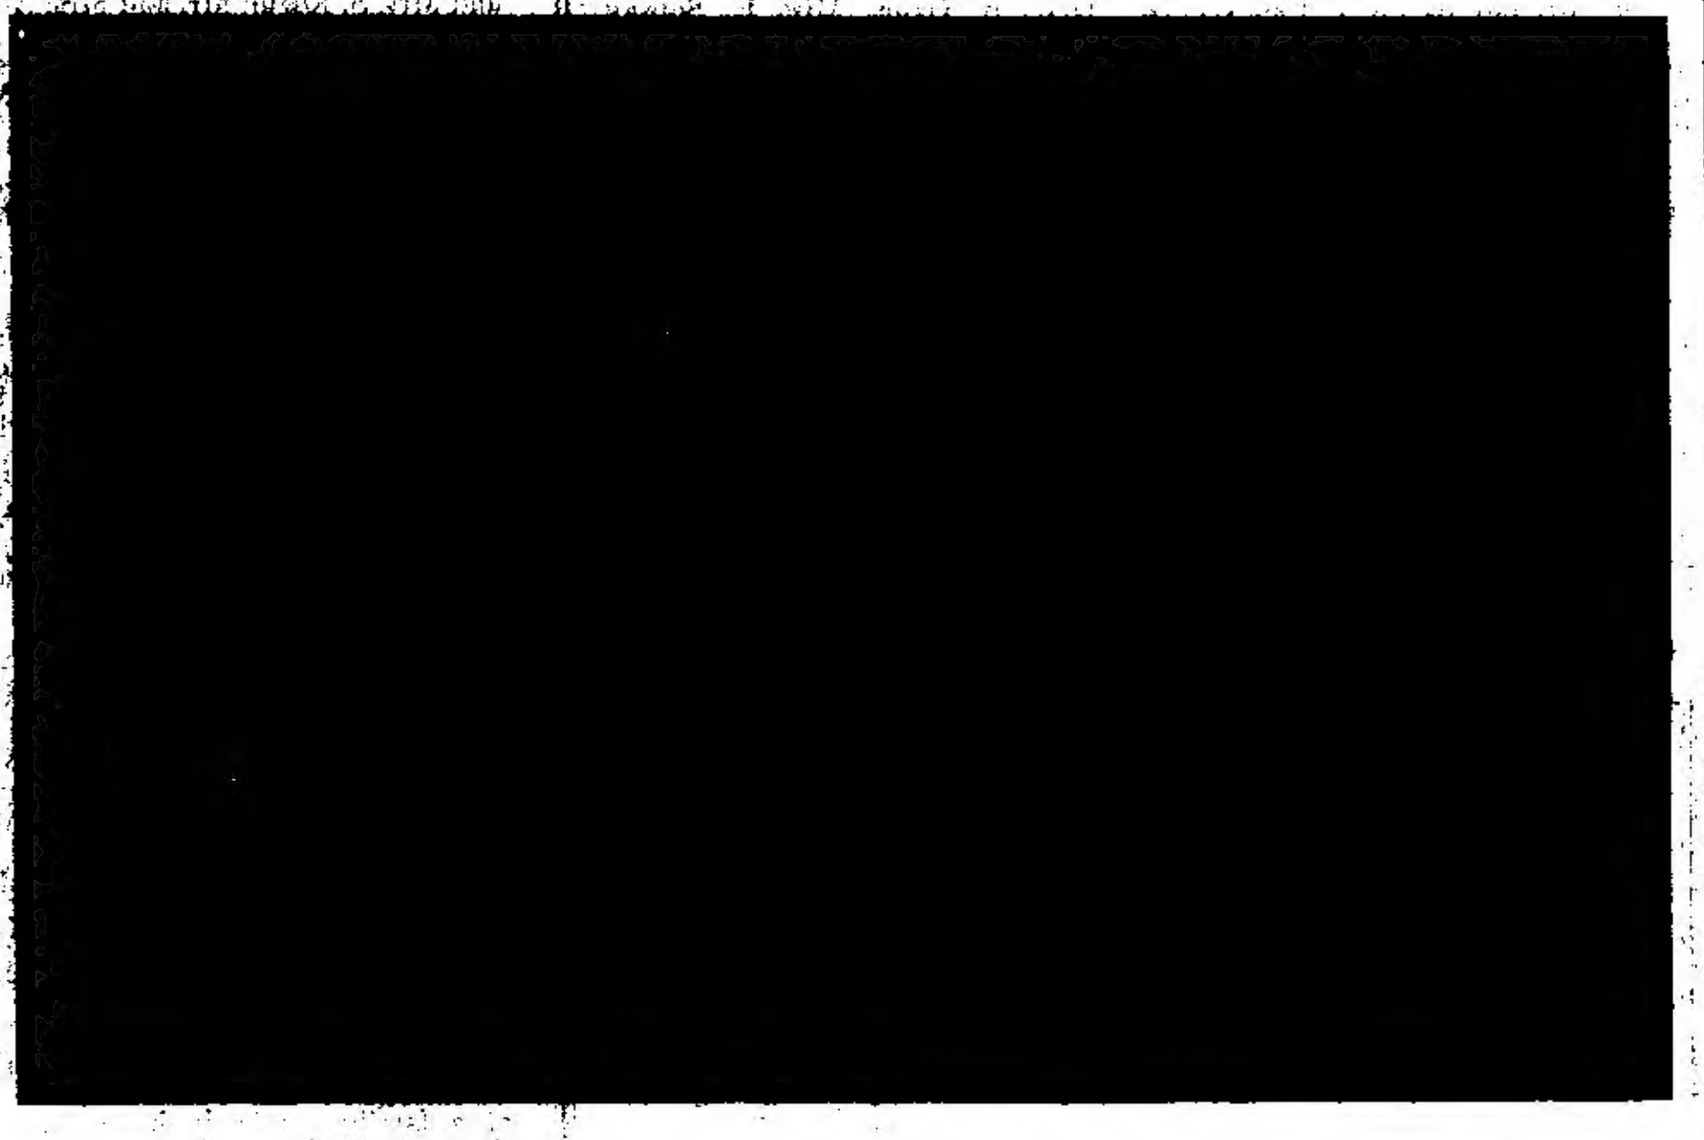
"CRAFTSMEN IN KEEPING THINGS NEW"



Trained Eyes that See—

EVERY garment sent to us is examined three times—when received—after dry-cleaning—and again after finishing. Eyes that have been trained to see the minutest of marks—the most finicky of details—critically inspect the work for tiny spots and discoloration, little deficiencies of finish, which ordinary eyes would never notice. For even the slightest blemish, a garment is sent back for correction. Nor can it pass to the shipping racks until, in every last detail, it measures up to the standard of craftsmanship we have so jealously sought and maintained. Here is that invisible "something" which makes you know Langley service is superior—and willing to pay the occasionally higher price which such exquisite care and craftsmanship justify.

Relief Drive Opens with $30,000

Subscriptions amounting to $30,000, and including pledges made at a dinner given by Sir William Mulock two weeks ago, were secured by the United Jewish Campaign of the United States and Canada at a second dinner given last night in the Primrose Club. The dinner formally opened a campaign to secure $100,000 in Ontario to assist the international organization in relieving destitution and suffering among Jews of Eastern Europe.

Speakers were: Charles Draimin, chairman of the Ontario organization; Rabbi Ferdinand Isserman and Miss Irma May, of New York City, who has recently returned from Europe. Before the dinner commenced a letter was read from Louis Marshall, who declared that the need for assistance from America was as great as at any time since 1914.

To illustrate conditions in Poland, Miss May stated that the factory life of Lodz had disappeared entirely. Once a thriving city of 400 factories, only ten of its industries were being operated. She said that one object of the campaign was to give workingmen and merchants an opportunity to get a fresh start in life. Miss May stated that 50 per cent. of the population of Poland were dependent on American remittances.

"To-day in Poland" she said, "our people of culture and intelligence—professors, lawyers, bankers, industrial geniuses, etc., are standing in the bread line, without hope in their hearts. There is nothing for them to do—their jobs have been taken away from them; others put in their places. They cannot get out of the country, so they wait in the bread line with fear in their hearts. Many people, once rich, live in big houses yet, without a stick of furniture. They cannot sell their houses, so they must live in them, empty, bare of everything, including food."

Some of the subscriptions were: $2,000, Charles Draimin, Yolles and Rotenberg; $1,500, N. L. Nathanson; $1,000, N. Helpert, Gelber Bros., M. Epstein, King Bros., Sigmund Samuel, Eley Marks, Samuel Kronick, Jacob and Arthur Cohen; $500, I. Brodey, Joseph Schwartz, N. Smith, J. Perkins, L. Rosenfeldt, M. Brenner, H. Miller, H. C. Greenberg, Sir William Mulock.

Monday, Miss May addressed a gathering of women, while the leaders of teams met later to apportion the work. The women undertook a house-to-house visit. At the same time, members of the different teams are to visit industrial establishments to place the plea of the unfortunate Jews of Eastern Europe before business men of the city.

A feature of the campaign is the arrangement whereby a subscriber can take care of one child for one year or three years. The cost of caring for one child for one year is $36. Mrs. David Dunkelman, Mrs. Meyer Brenner, Mrs. Brodey, Mrs. M. S. Till, Henry Pullan, Mrs. A. Rosenthal, Mrs. H. Allen, Samuel Kronick, A. Levy, and Mrs. B. Schwartz have undertaken to feed and clothe destitute children.

LOEW'S

Some of the most side-splitting situations ever incorporated in a comedy for the screen have been conceived and executed for Douglas MacLean in his latest starring vehicle "Hold That Lion." This rip-roaring laugh sensation will be seen at Loew's next week and not least important among the attractions will be the presence of lovely little Constance Howard as the darling Doug's leading lady.

In "Hold That Lion," Douglas MacLean breaks all the rules of big game hunting, and in doing so, furnishes sixty minutes of hilarious action and hair-raising thrills.

Constance Howard, the radiant newcomer, is the fetching little blonde for whom MacLean braves the unsociable lions. Walter Hiers, Cyril Chadwick, Wade Boteler and George Fearce ably second the happy-go-lucky comedian.

Has Our Community a Personality?

Or take the City of Montreal. There, owing to the exigencies of the local situation, the tendency of the established section of the community is towards orthodoxy in religion. Now orthodoxy in Montreal has a definite character. It has standards, formulas, traditions. Montreal orthodoxy has a distinct connotation.

In Toronto our Temple is neither a synagogue nor a temple. Our communal contour has not lent shape or form to the Reform establishment. Our community has not evolved a characteristic attitude towards liberal Judaism. Likewise, our orthodox synagogues have not acquired a character expressive of the tendencies of religious life among Toronto Jews. The smaller synagogues have attempted no adaptation to local conditions. The leading synagogues do not know where they stand. One day they adopt a stand-pat policy. The next day they make a gesture of progressiveness. Toronto orthodoxy has not passed the stage of experimenting. It certainly does not know what its position is on the question of religious orientation.

Are our charity institutions safely established? In most of the larger American cities the Jews take it for granted that they must help the poor, and the non-debatable character of the premise is expressed in solidly-reared federations. About federations there is to be no disputing and no anxiety. Hence the charity federations are in most cases well-endowed and supported. The charity-habits of the communities are embodied in permanent institutions. The communal personalities have their charity-traits definitely marked.

In this city the Federation is constantly in difficulties. The community as an entity has not achieved the sense of communal responsibility to make its institutions solid and permanent. This insecurity of our charity institutions reflects the indefiniteness of our communal character.

We have cultural institutions. Chief among them is the Zionist organization. Zionism is undoubtedly the profoundest factor in Jewish life. It envisages Jewish existence as a significant phase of human development. In Toronto Zionists are supposed to be strongly entrenched. Now, outside of Hadassah, which functions effectively within its own sphere, the Zionist organization is inconsistent in its application of Zionist ideas to life. Is it to be denied that the Zionists have not fully appreciated the importance of educating their youth in the doctrines of Zionism? The Zionist organization is the exponent of the ideal of Jewish culture. Have the Zionists seen to it that Jewish cultural achievements are accessible to the public? Have we a Jewish library in this city, a Jewish forum, exhibitions of Jewish art?

Zionism as the chief sponsor of Jewish culture has not realized the implications of the Zionist ideal. Thus we see that in the domain of cultural effort our community lacks the co-ordinating power of a mature personality.

It is a question of time and leadership. Our community is still new. With wise leadership it will ripen and develop into a richer and more vital group personality

Rabbi Isserman's Editorial

All glory to the federation of churches and to the synagogue in Detroit which were neither awed nor intimidated by wealth. The church and synagogue must not take sides in the industrial warfare, unless they take the side of justice and peace and of God. The church and the synagogue, though dependent on the generosity of their rich members, must not be awed nor intimidated by them. For truth, for justice, for peace, these fortresses of God must stand and war. When they capitulate as did the Y.M.C.A. in Detroit to the aristocratic element, then they have hauled down the ensign of the Lord of Hosts. The modern church and synagogue must strive to indicate that the enemies of labour cannot find shelter in the house of God, that religion is not the slave of the wealthy, but that, true to its highest spirit, it will stand as a heroic champion for the oppressed and dispossessed.

HADASSAH

Hadassah Council met Monday afternoon at the Zionist Institute, 206 Beverley Street. Dr. Shayne, vice-president of the Toronto Zionist organization, stressed the contribution made by Hadassah to the Zionist movement.

Palestine was described by Sigmund Samuel, who spent some time in the East recently, and who illustrated his talk with interesting lantern slides. The speaker referred to his father and mother, who constituted the seventh Jewish family in Toronto, and told of the first little synagogue opened in 1856 in an upper room at Yonge and Richmond Streets.

Rabbi F. M. Isserman introduced Mr. Samuel, and I. Ellison, recently appointed director of the Toronto Zionist office, presided over the introduction of the executive of the Hadassah Council for the new year. Mrs. A. B. Bennett, vice-president, presided. Violin solos were contributed by Mr. Langer. Officers of the Council: Honorary president, Mrs. A. Selick; president, Mrs. D. Dunkleman; vice-presidents, Mesdames A. B. Bennett, Kronick and L. M. Singer; treasurer, Mrs. L. M. Schwartz; corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. Wagman; recording secretary, Mrs. C. Herlig.

Central Chapter met at the Zionist Building, Monday, October 11, Mrs. L. M. Schwartz in the chair. Rabbi Berger, of Montreal, spoke on "The Greatness of Hadassah." The executive secretary of the Zionist Council of Ontario, I. M. Ellenson, spoke. Mrs. Abramowitz gave a report on the National Fund box collections. Three hundred additional boxes were placed in homes by the committee. A bazaar will be held by the chapter, December 15. The entertainment committee presented Miss Goodman, accompanied by Miss Cohen, in several song selections. Peggy Borsook, accompanied by Rose Horowitz, sang. A gold pin set with pearls was raffled. Mrs. M. Rogul held the lucky number. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Weiner and Mrs. Fine, hostesses.

Central Chapter regular meeting Monday evening, Oct. 25, at the Zionist Institute. Final arrangements for the affair Wednesday, December 15. Speaker. Musical programme.

Confidence--the Keynote of Success

The knowledge that one is properly dressed creates that confidence which characterizes a successful man.

Collars that feel like a caress. The Van-Dusen and semi-soft made to rival the best starched collar.

Shirts that fit correctly. No bulging at neck or bosom. Cuffs turned evenly, and when necessary taken off and reversed.

Socks and Woollens with that soft, velvety feeling so much desired and only possible when a soap like "Ivory" is used.

Repairs—Every article the man wears kept in first-class condition, not merely "mending free."

JEWISH PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS MEETING

Members and friends attended the twelfth annual meeting of the Jewish People's Schools, Sunday, October 10, at 2.30 p.m., at Morin Hall, 3414 Park Avenue, to hear the reports of the principal and executive board and to elect representatives to carry on the work of the schools. The principal, S. Wiseman, reported that the two schools are educating 600 pupils, distributed in thirty-two classes ranging from the kindergarten grades to the most advanced college courses. The schools are over-crowded and hundreds of applications for admission have been refused. Kindergarten methods are the same as in the Protestant schools of Montreal, with the exception that the language of instruction is Hebrew. The pupils in the advanced classes receive instruction in two languages, Hebrew and Yiddish, the Bible in the original, Jewish history, Hebrew and Yiddish literature, social studies and current events. Thirty-two pupils during the summer completed the elementary, the high school and advanced courses of the schools, and have received their diplomas. School number two, in existence since 1924, is developing.

The principal's report was followed by the report of the chairman of the executive, M. Dickstein. He dwelt on the great number of pupils who get their tuition free of charge on account of the restricted means of their parents and a greater number who paid less than the average cost. He pointed out that the budget of the schools, over $32,000, was covered by the income of the school fees, and by the executive board and board of directors. M. Nobleman, president, was unanimously re-elected for the seventh term; I. Cohen and Max Vineberg, elected vice-presidents; S. Beckow, chairman of finance committee; M. H. Myerson, honorary secretary; H. M. Caiserman, A. Costin, M. Dickstein, H. Dorfman, Ph. Fainer, L. Hamer, I. Kaufman, J. Kaufman, L. Miller, H. Robinson, L. Rubin, S. Reinblatt, D. Silverstein, A. Wigdor, S. Winkler, S. Wiseman, M.A., Z. Wolofsky, J. Schaffran. It was unanimously decided to inscribe J. Schaffran in the Golden Book of the schools for services for the schools. This meeting marks the opening of a $25,000 campaign to enable the executive to open a new school, to clear the schools of last year's deficit and of long-standing liabilities, and to provide for the deficit of 1927.
